It was a busy day for the SCIP team as they were immersed in completing their projects. With many deadlines established, the teams worked with great focus and determination. Additionally the team was assisted by SCIP alumni. Phillip, majoring in graphic design, assisted the design team in developing the golf flyer. Dean, majoring in mass communications, gave the media team insight on outreaching to potential sponsors through social media.

Hosted at Credit Suisse the SCIP team met distinguished individuals of the business world. Dora Abreu facilitated a workshop highlighting skills any young leader should utilize. The students then divided into several groups and discussed business etiquette and effective ways for communication. After the guest speakers left the students continued working on their respective projects.

SCIP Leaders Get a “Whiff” of Thierry Mugler Company

On Wednesday, the SCIP young leaders were gifted with the visit from Joseph McElroy. He is a senior director of education in the Clarins Fragrance Group. Due to his company’s affiliation with Thierry Mugler fragrance, he was able to bring in various scents. He showcased the fragrance Angel and held a discussion on how the scents created various sensations. He also gave insight on sustaining a business. His profound outlooks on the qualities a company needs to possess were especially shown when he said: “For a company to succeed it needs to maintain a consistent message.”

Grand Tour of Microsoft Technology Center

This Wednesday was a treat for all of us, as the SCIP Young Leaders received a tour of Microsoft Technology Center, SCIP's host for the summer and a special partner. The mission of the company was the most impressive, every aspect of the dwelling placed heavy emphasis on the customer's comfortability and quick accommodation to their needs. The tour started with the Focus Room, which generates the energy needed to power the entire floor. It was fascinating to be actually inside what seemed to be a life size PC and it really put into perspective the inner workings of a corporation. Our personal favorite was the envisioning room; the dim lighted setting was a perfect hub spot for team collaborations and communication. With state of the art technologies, we were presented with a motivational video and words of wisdom from our speaker, Mr. Richard Traverso . Beyond the pristine clear glass that is the Microsoft building, there lies the daily grind of the workers, the squeal of a satisfied customer and of course the jubilation of the SCIP young leaders. Microsoft, coeval with the fast-paced world, manages to innovate the perfect blend of technological innovation and plain old fashion customer service to become a leader in software design.

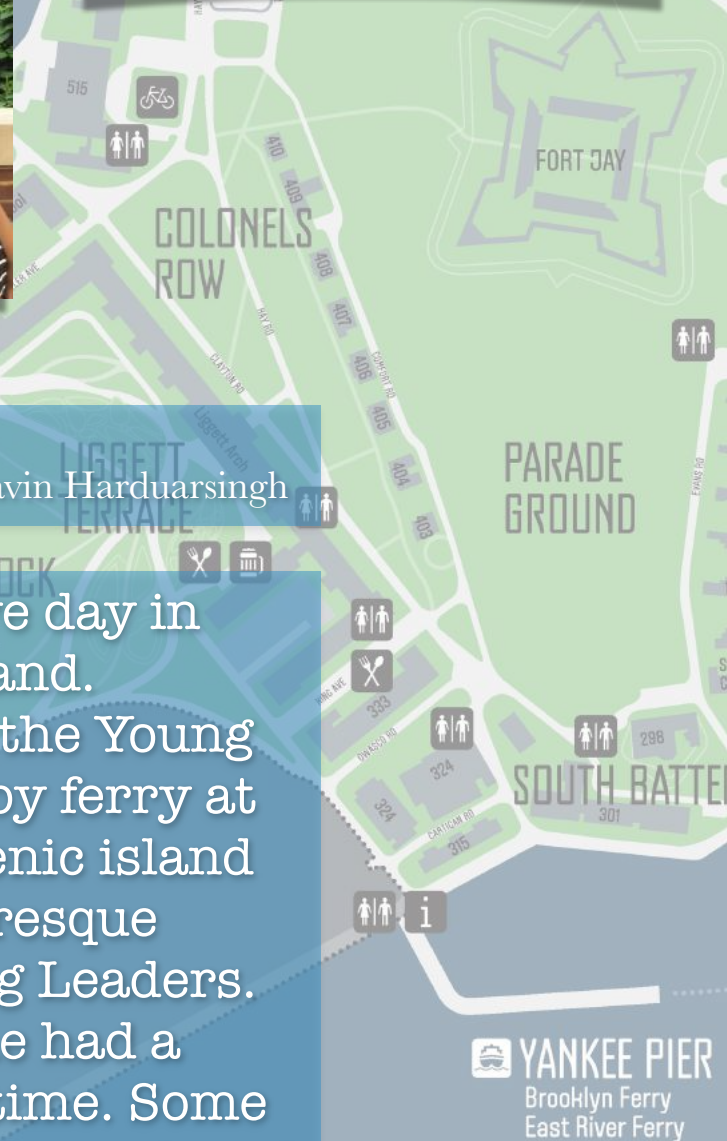

GOVERNORS ISLAND

Thursday was a physically active day in which SCIP visits Governors Island. Accompanied by the Mancebos, the Young Leaders commute to the island by ferry at Battery Park. The green and scenic island had basketball courts and picturesque views enjoyed by all of the Young Leaders. Split into three groups, everyone had a very enjoyable and memorable time. Some went biking for an hour while others played basketball and took pictures of the New York City skyline. Ultimately, the trip put young leaders at ease and gave them the opportunity to interconnect with peers.

Interviews

Eden and Ashley talk about what it feels like to be the youngest leaders in the SCIP Family.

"It's a little intimidating being the youngest. However, it is fun but it can also be confusing. Being younger and trying to be with other people who are older than you can be a little hard. Some advice I would give is that if it feels hard, just keep trying, focus and stay concentrated."

"I was really scared because I thought it would be difficult for me to work with older people in the corporate world because a 12-year old can only do so much. Advice I would give to other kids would be to join programs and internships like SCIP to start noticing what they want to do when they grow older."
